Purpose and scope

It seeks potential counterparts for UNFPA LACRO to support the initiative's expected results. The activities cover Regional Latin America and the Caribbean; the portal locations include Panama and Coclé.

The initiative aims to strengthen Afrodescendant youth leadership, policy advocacy and evidence for bodily autonomy, sexual and reproductive rights, and GBV prevention. It aligns this work with international human rights mechanisms. Its focus connects regional policy advocacy and evidence with the leadership of Afrodescendant youth and their organisations.

Funding

The portal lists an indicative budget of USD 210,000. Annex I gives a proposed programme budget of USD 150,000 to USD 210,000 for 2027–2029. These are indicative figures, and the amount is to be formalised in an annual work plan after implementer selection.

The call presents a regional initiative and an indicative programme budget; the amount is not a confirmed award or guaranteed funding. The proposed budget range is stated for 2027–2029, with the amount formalised in an annual work plan after the implementer is selected.

Who can apply

The applicant route is for an Afrodescendant civil society organisation or an Afrodescendant academic entity. The stated applicant classes are Afrodescendant civil society organisations and Afrodescendant academic entities.

The route applies to those two classes of Afrodescendant applicant. An organisation considering an application should identify whether it is an Afrodescendant civil society organisation or an Afrodescendant academic entity, such as a university, study centre, professional network or Afrodescendant NGO. The call identifies those classes as its applicant route.

Priorities

The call prioritises evidence and knowledge management through two intersectional situational studies on sexual and reproductive rights, bodily autonomy and GBV among diverse Afrodescendant women and youth. The studies are to cover at least 8 Latin American and Caribbean countries.

It also prioritises youth capacities and leadership through the design and implementation of a regional training-of-trainers programme with active youth participation. The programme covers human rights, anti-racism, intersectionality, sexual and reproductive rights, GBV and social-norm transformation.

A further priority is establishing a regional network of trained Afrodescendant youth leaders for local and national training, capacity building and policy advocacy. The indicator refers to youth from at least 8 countries. Together, these priorities address evidence, youth capacity and leadership, and regional networking and advocacy.
