Programme purpose

The call aims to strengthen resilience through food-for-assets and integrated livelihoods while building government capacity for shock-resilient policies and programmes.

Target population and geographic coverage

The groups named in the programme include 2,000 vulnerable households (10,000 beneficiaries), particularly women and youth.

The activities cover Kano State.

Planned activities

The programme gives priority to food-for-assets and community asset creation and integrated livelihoods, on-farm and off-farm practices.

Other priorities

- Cash and voucher assistance.
- Smallholder agricultural market support and sustainable market linkages.
- Fisheries and aquaculture.
- Microfinance, microcredit and revolving loan funds.
- Community mobilisation and coexistence with local communities.
- Self-reliance and income diversification.
- Entrepreneurship and agribusiness skills.
- Technical and vocational education and training.
- Shock-resilient social protection and agriculture policies; government and community resilience skills, tools and infrastructure.
